Michael Whalen, the man who was shot yesterday afternoon in the Denver saloon on lower Twenty-fifth street, is as well as can be expected after receiving four bullet wounds. Drs. Dickson and Forbes performed an operation on him at the hospital for the purpose of removing the bullets.

The most dangerous wound received, it is believed by the physicians, is the one in the back, which was no doubt inflicted as Whalen fell to the floor of the saloon. The bullet entered the back, enetrating through to the inside of he body, but it is not thought that ny of the vital organs were particuarly injured by the bullet, although the man was too weak to stand the loctor's finding it. One bullet entered the abdomen, and two pierced th rm, all three bullets were located and emoved from his body. The doctors ope for his recovery, although his conition is serious.

It was thought that he would surely ie before the operation was performed, and Dist. Atty. Hayes, Chief of Police owning and Detective Pender went to the hospital, taking with them th talian Michael Murray, who did the statement from Whalen, who gave his name, place of birth and place of resience of relatives. When Murray was rought before him for identification e did not positively identify him as he man who fired the shots, but said t he was one of the Austrians

Murray has employed Attorney Her-bert R. MacMillan to defend him, and nce his talk with his attorney he has fused to talk. If Whalen lives Mury will be charged with assault with deadly weapon with intent to commurder, but if Whalen dies he will charged with murder in the first ses who saw the shooting, who will detained as witnesses in the case ether Whalen lives or dies. WEEK IN TERRIFIC BLIZZARD

Frightful Experience of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cox of Mona.

Lost in Mountains and Exposed to Bitter Cold Without Food or Fire -A Night in a Snowdrift.

special Correspondence. Mt. Pleasant, Sanpete Co., Nov. 26.-Edward D. Cox and wife, whose home is in Mona, Juab county, and who left Orangeville, Emery county, last Wed-nesday, by team to make their way nomeward over the mountains, are now at this place, almost perished from cold and hunger, having been exposed to the mountain blizzard for a week, and four days without food. At daybreak this morning Mr. Cox reached Mr. Brown's place in Mountain View, three miles east of here, and reported that his wife was somewhere back in the his wife was somewhere back in the mountains buried in a snowdrift, alone and unsheltered. Rescuers soon brought her in, and both will survive, though the feet and lower limbs of both are badly frozen. The storm which has prevailed in the mountains durings the past week was something terrific, and Mr. and Mrs. Cox were exposed to all its fury. They started out with three horses, and pro-visions for three days. They lost their wagon and one of their three horses in snowslide on the side of the ridge The other horses soon gave out. They attempted to walk to this city, and for several days they have been wandering back and forth through the snow, making little headway. About sundown last night the poor woman sank into a snowdrift, too exhausted to go further and the husband was obliged to leave her alone while he made his way as best he could to seek for help. When the rescuers found Mrs. Cox she frezen stiff, but with the aid of Drs. Gowans and Ray was revived with much difficulty. It is feared that the yoman will lose both hands and feet. She is in a very critical condition.

Everything possible will be done here for the sufferers till morning, when they will be taken to Moroni, thence by train to their home in Mona.

A party consisting of the city mar shal and 10 men left this evening in search of their wagon and contents and the two remaining horses.

The sufferings of the couple are terrible to contemplate. The second day out they were caught in a blizzard and lost, but before any serious harm befell them, the couple were overtaken by Peter Francis of Price and put on the right road. Francis told them to follow his tracks but the blizzard waged more flercely, and they soon were lost again in the mountains. After the terres gave out, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox were forced to continue their aimless journey on foot. There was no cessation to the storm, and both hus-band and wife were nearly maddened with their torture, being without fire or food. When Mr. Cox reached Mr. Prown's place this morning he was barely able to tell the story of his experience and of his wife's peril, but as soon as he was revived he fought des-

The scarcity of meteorological stations near the equator gives interest to a recent report of the observations for five years of Dr. E. Goeldi at Para. The mean temperature for the year is 78 degrees F, and the an-nual variation is extremely small -only 2.5 degrees—while the mean daily variation is 16 degrees. The mean annual rainfall is about 102 inches. A wet season occurs from January to April, with a relatively dry season-in which rain is somewhat frequent—from May to December. The rains are almost usively confined to thunderstorms of the afternoon and evening.

In the singular failure of the old windows of York Cathedral, the glass has lost most of its transparency, and in places has become so perforated that it crumbles at the slightest touch. To stop the "disease" some glass of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries has been removed. For shallow-draught steamers, both side-wheels and stern-wheels have dis-advantages, especially in the weight of their machinery, while propellers—as they have been used in fixed tunnels lose efficiency through increased fric tion as loading sinks the tunnel's open-ing. In a new English propeller boat for shallow rivers, the stern end of the tunnel is made adjustable by a hinged fiap. Raising or lowering the fiap keeps the tunnel opening just below the sur-face, and it is claimed that with a mod-erate load the gain is 25 per cent.

Of the balloon soundings of the at-mosphere by M. Telsserenc de Bort of Paris, not less than 258 have reached or exceeded 11,000 meters (6.835 miles). To avoid the direct influence of the sun on the instruments, the balloons were ent up at night. On one occasion, in March, the exceptionally low temperature of minus 75 degrees C (minus 103 degrees F.) was recorded and the observations brought out the remarkable fact that decrease in temperature ceases at about 11,000 meters, while beyond there may be a slight warming in zone of nearly constant temperature This layer of uniform temperature falls somewhat lower during low barometer, while it rises 4,000 meters higher during high pressure, and in summer it is reached only at 13,000 or 14,000 meters. Other observers confirm the existence of an atmospheric stratum where de-crease of temperature with height is interrupted. In this layer, it is con-jectured, the air currents flow on without interruption, and the cyclonic whirls of the lower atmosphere cause little disturbance.

The sky within the orbit of Mercury was carefully photographed at the Lick observatory during the 1901 eclipse, in the hope that the hypothetical planet of Leverrier and others might be discovered. Later examination of the negatives has practically proven that no such body exists. An object of sufficient size to produce the observed disturbance of Mercury's orbit would be too conspicuous to escape detection, and the possibility is small that it may have been hidden by the sun or the bright corona, as the area thus cov-eved was only 1-200 of that in which the search was made. Prof. Perrine has suggested that the finely matter causing the zodiacal light may be sufficient in the aggregate to pro-duce the perturbations noted. The birth and death rates of Italy
